To whom this may concern:

Being part of the Fashion Design program at Fanshawe College has been an exceptionally positive experience, mainly due to the knowledgeable, skilled, caring professors in the program. Being not only an experienced professor, Lorrie observes the class and guides students at a pace and understanding that is best suited in their capability. Most eager to answer any questions or solve any problems inside and outside of class time, she has continually taken time out of her personal agenda and made it her mission to provide success in the student's future.

Lorrie has proven herself trustworthy, and as first year students we have found her to be most helpful not only in class material but in life challenges in general. Students are handed a life that is very overwhelming with new life challenges of learning to cope with finances, work overload, grasping concepts, time management, residential issues, and personal problems. As a considerate professor, Lorrie has taken it into her own hands to go above and beyond school curriculum and help students in every aspect of their lives. Lorrie's "down to earth" attitude allows students to have great confidence in approaching her in any situation and we have no doubts that she can guide us down the right path with prominent achievements.

Sincerely,

Stephanie Connell & Jeanette Robinson
